BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian jet fighters and U.S. made Israeli F-15s duelled Sunday over Beirut in the biggest air battle over Lebanon in three months. Four Syrian MiGs were downed, both sides said, and Syria claimed two Israeli jets were "hit."

The Israelis said all their planes made it safely back to base.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Thomas Boston called the air clash a "dangerous development" and appealed on all sides to exercise restraint.

Syria said its MiG-21s scrambled to intercept the Israeli warplanes after the Israelis attacked civilian camps — presumably Palestinian — in the Danour area 10 miles south of Beirut. The Israeli military commander in Tel Aviv said its jets, including the F-15, America's most sophisticated fighter, were on a reconnaissance mission over Palestinian guerrilla bases.

The planes headed back west and the daylight erupted over the war-torn Beirut airport, the sources said.

Both sides reported four Syrian jets went down. Lebanese government sources said two crashed in flames near the airport, and their pilots were seen parachuting to safety. The other two reportedly went down farther into the hills. A Syrian military communiqué issued in Damascus said two Israeli jets also were "hit," but did not say specifically they had crashed.

I saw two planes come into the sky and then suddenly two more appeared," said Ahmed Abdu Khle. "One of a sudden saw one fall down with fire coming from its left wing. It exploded when it hit. There was a huge flame."

Last June 27, Israeli warplanes shot down five Syrian MiG-21s in the dogfight over southern Lebanon.

Western military sources said all were downed by a single Israeli F-15 that was on the ground in Israel when the fight began but was quick enough to get there in time to help the slower Israeli jets.

The Syrians, whose 22,000 troops Lebanon, have pledged to defend Lebanese territory against Israeli air attacks. Israeli jets frequently fly over Beirut and southern Lebanon on surveillance missions or to attack Palestinian positions.

State Department spokesman Boston had no comment Monday on whether Israel's use of F-15s over Lebanon violates U.S. restrictions limiting the aircraft to self-defense missions. The Israelis say their Lebanese operations are pre-emptive measures to defend against Palestinian attacks.

Provo couple try alcohol as fuel to power cars

By KATHY EYRE
Universal Staff Writer

Provo, may be the first city in the nation to operate alcohol powered vehicles, according to Marilyn Andrews of a Provo co-op known as Developing Answers to World Needs.

Mrs. Andrews and her husband Jack are devotees of an alcohol fuel. Monday they presented a plan to Mayor William W. Anderson and City Treasurer Ed Christensen, offering to sell the city DAWN service as to how to obtain funding for the project. The federal government is a probable source of money.

Right now, the city has made no commitment," Christensen said, "but we are interested. The city has given DAWN service as to how to obtain funding for the project. The federal government is a probable source of money."

Mrs. Andrews estimated the fuel would cost about $7.5 per gallon. "Maybe a year ago the price wouldn't have been competitive. But we've been told gas will go up to $1.50 soon and that will make alcohol competitive."

"The fuel is not 'poison,' Mrs. Andrews explained. The DAWN fuel is approximately 97 percent alcohol and only 3 percent gasoline with a small amount of water added.

We have been running our 1969 Chrysler station wagon on it," Mrs. Andrews said. "It only cost $6.00 to convert our engine to the fuel."

Once converted, a car may go back to gasoline without any further alterations. "As long as there is less than a gallon of alcohol in the tank, you can put gasoline back in the car. You just don't mix the two fuels," Mrs. Andrews said.

The alcohol is made from farm by-products, Mrs. Andrews said. DAWN became interested in alcohol in an attempt to help farmers become fuel efficient.

Andrews said that he has been invited to a national energy fair to be held in Dodge City, Kansas Oct. 19-21. The Department of Energy, the Farm Home Administration Bureau, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms are joining with the High Plains Journal and the Dodge City Chamber of Commerce in conducting the fair.

Andrews will take the plans for his still to Dodge City and teach farm participants how to make alcohol.

Mrs. Andrews said that many farmers have been experimenting with alcohol, but the ATF has made it difficult to get permits to produce alcohol. She said the work of her husband and others have helped to reduce the red tape needed to develop alcohol fuels.

Mrs. Andrews emphasized that DAWN is a non-profit organization. "If all goes well, we could expand into commercial use," she said. "We would want all profits back into the co-op. We would share our knowledge with anyone who can use it," she said.

Jim Black, Senator Heath's assistant in charge of the ATF, said he wants to set up a model closed system farm. Mrs. Andrews said, "The emphasis would be on self-sufficiency. Crops not used for food for the farm family would be used to produce alcohol. The alcohol would be used for running the farm machinery, and the animals would be by-products from making the alcohol."

Mrs. Andrews said that Black is still working to find funding for the DAWN project.

New speaker slated for today's devotional

Elmer Robert L. Simpson, a member of the First Quorum of Seventy of the LDS Church, will speak at today's 10 a.m. Devotional assembly, replacing Elder Jack H. Gosnell Jr. who is on vacation.

A special 15-minute, narrated presentation of the Young Ambassadors' trip to mainland China this summer will be shown at the beginning of the assembly. Several performing groups which toured the United States, Canada and several foreign countries last spring and summer will be honored at the assembly.

Elder Simpson, a native of Salt Lake City who spent much of his life in Southern California, was called to serve in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church in October, 1961. He held that position for 10 and one-half years.

ELDER ROBERT L. SIMPSON

In April 1972, he was called as an assistant to the Council of the Twelve and managing director of the Church Social Services Department. Two years later, he was appointed associate managing director of the Melchizedek Priesthood M.I.A.

From 1968-69, Elder Simpson was president of the Young Ambassadors' trip to mainland China. While serving as a captain in the Air Force during World War II in North Africa and the Middle East, he was servicemen's coordinator for the Church in that area.

Elder Simpson worked for Pacific Telephone Company for 20 years before being called to the Presiding Bishopric. He graduated from Santa Monica City College.

He and his wife, Jeanne Chandler Simpson of Los Angeles, have three children — all of whom have attended BYU.

Since July 1975, he has served as managing director of Church Conference. In January this year, Elder Simpson was appointed as one of three managing directors in the Missionary Department he attended BYU.

Lighting prevented flickers

BYU's Y lighting will lack one tradition — the Y by the Intercollegiate Knights. Call, in charge of upholding the traditions for the school, said he was told, "no way" to the lighting. Phillips, an assistant to Offer, said the Wasatch is currently in "extreme fire danger," and no open fire is allowed. The temperature has been in the 90s everyday with very little precipitation. Conditions have combined to make an extremely dry fire which in turn have created a fire watch, he said. Anderson informed as BYU President Dallin Oaks said welcoming remarks and then introduced Phillips.

the precautions the IK would take. "We proposed to clean all the nearby brush around the Y and have 40 men stand by with shovels and fire extinguishers."

Kelvin Cullimore, vice-president of the ASBYU Organization Office, said he thought the IK had made efforts to make the lighting safe. "In the past years there have been dry seasons," he said. "This is not the first time that the forest service has said no, but they have always been able to work it out."

Cullimore said, "I think it's a shame that they've gotten this strict. One by one our traditions are being done away with. This school's spirit is built by tradition."

Phillips, who is also in charge of recreation for the forest service, said he realized the tradition was important, but the risk was far too great. "This tradition is not as important when compared to the many dangers of a big fire," he said.

Harold Anderson, head of the physical plant, said he was in complete agreement with the forest service. Anderson requested permission for the IK to light the Y. "It was told there was a fire watch in the Wasatch Front," he said. "They told me it would take a pretty good rainstorm or snowstorm to make it possible to light the Y."

First Child's statue unveiled at B

By JEFF FARLEY
Universal Staff Writer

the bronze statue entitled "First Child," built by the BYU Alumni, was unveiled Monday afternoon at the sequential unveiling of the monument honoring the look place during a noon ceremony on the campus of the family Living Center. Over 250 students, faculty, and administrators gathered at the family Living Center for the unveiling of the monument. The statue was unveiled at 12:00 p.m. and then introduced to the audience that the unveiling has been held as the first event of BYU's observation of the Church's Sesquicentennial celebration, the 150th anniversary of the restoration of the priesthood.

The idea for the statue was the result of a letter from the artist's experience as a BYU student. It was where he met and married his wife. The artist's experience was that he said the family and his insights which conceived the statue were very important.

point in the program, Smith related his own experience to the crowd which happened while he was putting the statue on the stand. "I heard this voice say, 'Dennis, turn the statue the other way.' I looked around and couldn't see anyone anywhere."

He was surprised to learn the identity of the strange voice when he went to church next Sunday. A man in his ward who operates the huge crane at the construction site next to the statue's location asked him, "Did you hear me tell at you when you were setting the statue to turn it the other way?" Smith's family attended the ceremony. His wife indicated the statue took about two years to complete.

As she watched a young girl go up and touch the sculptured young girl in the bronze piece, she said, "I wish the young girl to be accessible to the children and people."

Smith is a BYU graduate and studied art in Spain and at the Danish Royal Academy in Denmark. Blaine R. Porter, dean of the College of Family Living, and Leola J. Woodbury, dean of the College of Fine Arts and Communications, unveiled the handsome bronze statue prior to the introduction.

The Keith McVie family sang two songs at the beginning of the program. The invocation was offered by Robert L. Smith, vice-president of Finance, and the benediction was given by Porter. A luncheon was held in the Wilkinson Center after the ceremony to honor Smith and his wife. Sculpture, Lorin F. Wheelwright, Dean Emeritus and Centennial Director, spoke at the gathering.

Revelation fails to help dollar

LONDON — The dollar showed little benefit Monday from the weekend upward revelation of the West German mark, Gold prices bounced back from Friday's drop, but remained well below records set last week.

The footing of the mark, Europe's strongest currency, against a handful of its neighbors, was aimed at helping the weak and fluctuating dollar.

But one currency dealer said in Paris that while the mark revelation eased pressure temporarily against the dollar in the money market, it was not an answer to the dollar's fundamental problems — American inflation and lack of confidence in American leadership.

He said it was "extremely likely that further downward pressure on the dollar will build up."

Gold prices rose by around $10 an ounce, but kept below the record $390 an ounce achieved in London last Thursday.

Justice supported by solons

BOISE, Idaho — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, joined other members of Idaho's congressional delegation in criticizing the Justice Department for attempting to get U.S. Judge Marion J. Callahan to step down from a case because he is a Mormon Church official.

Justice Department attorneys have asked Callahan to disqualify himself from a case challenging the constitutionality of Congress extending the deadline for states to ratify the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

Callahan is a regional representative of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which has been outspoken in opposition to the amendment.

In a letter to Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, Church asked that the Justice Department drop the request. He called the action a "groundless insult." Church said the Justice Department request was a "considerate attack on the most basic of American rights — freedom of religion."

Reps. George Hansen and Steve Symms, both Idahoans, had criticized the Justice Department's effort earlier, and Sen. James McCure, R-Idaho, issued a similar request Friday.

Soviet champion skaters defeat

BERN, Switzerland — The Soviet husband-wife figure skating team of Oleg Protopopov and Ludmila Belousova, four-time world champions and twice Olympic champions, have defeated the West, the Swiss Justice Ministry announced today.

Their request for political asylum in Switzerland follows the recent defection of Swiss prominent Soviet ballet dancers in the United States.

A ministry spokesman, Ulrich Hubacher, said the 47-year-old Protopopov and his 43-year-old wife, the premier Russian ice skating team of the 1960s, defected during an exhibition tour of Western Europe. He said their defection was a "major political event."

Hubacher had no immediate comment on the motivation for their request or their present whereabouts in Switzerland.

Garn, Hatch disagree on Cuba

WASHINGTON — Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said Monday the Soviet blockade in Cuba has been training insurgents from all over Latin America and proposed an "immediate and total blockade of Cuba" until the force is removed.

Hatch also proposed that the United States support intelligence movements, communist states in Eastern Europe and elsewhere and give active support — without direct military involvement — to any movement opposing "Soviet neo-colonialism."

However, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, said that a total blockade should be considered only as a last resort because it might require the U.S. Navy to stop or sink Soviet vessels.

Garn said any move to set up a blockade should be preceded by moves to beef up U.S. forces in the area, including moving a carrier task force into waters off Cuba.

In addition, Garn said all further Senate consideration of the strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union should be deferred until that scientific and technical exchanges with the Soviet Union should be suspended.

"If these actions are not taken, then the United States should consider cutting off all trade and technology relationships and imposing a quarantine of Cuba, which would differ from a full blockade by not requiring the U.S. Navy to stop or sink Soviet ships," he said.

Lip, skin cancers big in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah, because of its predominantly Mormon population, has fewer cases of cancer connected with drinking and smoking than any other state, a report says.

But, partly because Utah's population is 98 percent white and more lip and skin cancers, said Dr. Charles S. Smith, one of the compilers of a report by the Utah Cancer Registry.

The higher incidence of those cancers may also be because of the relatively high altitude and sun exposure, he said.

Overall, there were 17 percent fewer cancers in males and 19 percent in females in the last 10 years when compared to national averages.

Silver reaching new heights

CHICAGO — An unprecedented upward spiral in silver futures continued Monday in New York in tight trading. Gold futures fell as traders defended late in the day to cash in their profits.

"Speculators' expectations have been raised to such a degree that when fresh loans (new buyers) get into the market, they expect an explosion. When it doesn't, they sell at the end of the day," an analyst said.

Silver futures, which have set new highs for 22 of the last 27 trading sessions on New York's Commodity Exchange Inc., fluctuated in an 80-cent range but closed with gains of 22 to 40 cents an ounce, at $13.97 for September delivery — 64 percent above a month ago.

Names of servicepeople needed for Project Uplift

With Christmas only three months away, the ASBYU Women's Office is requesting names of both married and single LDS servicepeople to be used for "Project Uplift."

"Project Uplift" has been in existence at least five years as a Women's Office sponsored service project. The package would contain dried fruit, nuts or moist cookies. We would like to emphasize sending dried fruit and nuts this year for the reason that some packages are sent overseas," said Miss Tucker.

"There is a real need for it (Project Uplift). A lot of servicepeople are far from home," she said. Miss Tucker also said that inactive LDS members and volunteers have benefited from "Project Uplift."

Names can be submitted until 5 p.m. Oct. 10 to Miss Tucker, ASBYU Women's Office, 42 E. 200 N. Group will be able to pick up the names Oct. 22-25.

Programs, lectures planned to observe Founders Day

Founders Day observances at BYU will include a variety of displays and programs for the public during Homecoming Week.

The university's 10 centers will have exhibits in the Stepdown courts. PLAC begins today and continuing until Saturday.

In addition, the College of Education will have open house in the McKay Building, featuring a tour of the facilities, a visit with administrators and faculty, and light refreshments from 1 to 5 p.m. on Friday.

The College of Fine Arts and communications will feature a nineteenth-century art exhibit during the week.

Nursing topics to be discussed

Unionization of nurses, national health insurance, the role of federal government in licensing and malpractice issues in nursing will be featured topics of discussion at the annual faculty workshop Wednesday in BYU's College of Nursing.

Dr. Barbara Vance, chairwoman of the workshop, said the public is invited to attend the full-day workshop program scheduled in the Varsity Theater of the Wilkeson Center.

Featured speaker at 8:15 a.m. is Dr. Stan Taylor, BYU professor of political science. He will discuss general questions relating to politics. At 9 a.m., Mrs. Barbara Curtis, chairwoman of the Nurses Council for Action in Politics, will discuss national health insurance, third-party payments, entry into practice at the U.S. level instead of the A.D. level, the role of the federal government in credentialing, licensing, and malpractice — political issues involving nursing.

A student panel will discuss the two speakers' topics at 10 a.m., followed by a panel discussion on local political issues. Panelists include Dr. Verlin Collins, immediate past-president of the Utah Nursing Association and director of nursing for Intermountain Health Care, Inc.; Mrs. Frances Fries, state senator who sponsored the Nurses Practice Act of 1975; and Mrs. Linda Riddle, associate professor of nursing at BYU and one of the family nurse practitioner graduate program. Mrs. Vance will be the panel moderator.

To conclude the workshop, Mrs. Curtis will give a summary at 12:40 p.m.

Atlantic City casinos niting Boardwalk

ANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—The glitter of one of Atlantic City's casinos is causing an unexpected fire on the Boardwalk. Officials said the fire was caused by a new casino hotel and causing the wooden way.

It put a page of paper out there and it burst into flames," said Fire Chief Joseph Grogan, who said the fire was caused by the lighting of the gas being used in the new casino hotel and causing the wooden way.

"I don't happen in a place like this because they don't have a talk," he added.

The fire caused a crowd of people to flee the area and the fire department had to use a hose to put out the fire. The fire was caused by the lighting of the gas being used in the new casino hotel and causing the wooden way.

Social office plans 'snarf n' snog' day

Snarf - To gorge oneself on enormous amounts of food.
Snog - See snarf entry.

Snurf - To snarf liquids.

They may be strange words, but students will have to know these words for one of ASBYU's Homecoming activities, "snarf and snog day."

The Homecoming event originally planned for Thursday has been cancelled due to the high cost of renting roller skates, said Grogan, activities committee person. A series of games involving the snarfing and snogging of words will be planned instead.

It looks like someone has passed a torch over the top of the Boardwalk and every now and then the craters start smoldering," Ingram said.

Casino executives have downplayed the fire incidents in front of their casino hotel. But city officials say the fire is replacing the warped panels.

"It's not a fire hazard," said Peter Boynton, Casino Atlantic City vice president of operations. "However, we intend to work with the city to address ourselves to anything it feels requires attention."

The city Planning Board is already studying the fire incidents in front of the new Boardwalk Regency are in the area and the fire department had to use a hose to put out the fire.

Academic programs Lectures available

By ANITA PENNINGTON

Wanted: future leaders in science, industry, art, education, letters and government. Students who qualify may be interested in what the ASBYU Academic Office has to offer.

Sharon Smoot, vice president of the ASBYU Academic Office, said he feels most BYU students do not realize what the office involves. He said students seldom get excited about academic programs.

"It's a great struggle to get students enthusiastic about academics," Smoot said. "I feel that it is the greatest experience that students can have."

Smoot said many projects of the LDS Church have predicted the rise of BYU to a superior level in academic fields. He reiterated President Dallin Oaks' words that students can have one of their greatest educational experiences if they attend the lectures and speeches offered on campus.

The goals of the Academic Office are to emphasize awareness of current issues and to fill students' scholastic needs. Smoot said. Many programs are offered by the office to attain these goals.

The Free Market of Ideas is a lecture series which offers students a chance to hear professors on campus. It allows students to associate informally with professors and to learn more about their opinions on certain issues. It also allows the student to learn more about particular fields without taking a class.

One program making a comeback is the Last Lecture Series. Professors are invited to give a lecture on the assumption it is their last lecture to the world. Panel debates provide students with a chance to see conflicting viewpoints on a specific issue.

The Academic Office sponsors other programs such as the book exchange. "This semester the book exchange will be big," Smoot said. He said students will gain by buying and selling their books through the exchange, besides giving fellow students a better deal.

This year the new Student Awareness Senate will join the Academic Office with what Smoot considers the greatest contribution. The Student Awareness Senate will consist of 15 students who will act as direct student representatives to the Academic Office. Their primary responsibility will be to let students know about academic events on campus and to obtain student responses regarding academics. Smoot said this would help make the Academic Office aware of what the students want.

The American Perspectives Series brings some of the most well-known figures in America to campus. According to Smoot, the Academic Office spends thousands of dollars to bring each speaker to campus.

Smoot explained one of the main problems of the Academic Office is students do not understand the value of the many lectures offered. "There are not just mediocre speakers," said Smoot. "The lectures can benefit all students. They are not just geared toward the particular subjects the speakers are noted for."

cutting back energy

Building temperature restrictions, issued last week, will be active in order to try to conserve energy.

FOR MECHANICAL

Support Services Vice President Jim Schreinemakers said the order to comply with the restrictions, heated areas on campus will not be allowed to rise above 68 degrees this winter. Air-conditioned areas will be held to a maximum level of 78 degrees during the summer months.

"We're already saving about 30 percent on our estimated energy projection usage issued in 1977," said Paul Richards, Director of Public Communications. "But good common sense on the part of the students can help us save even more energy, especially at a school this size."

Richards said to heat or cool water requires money and energy. In individual studies can be helpful if they will not be wasteful and remember we are still experiencing an energy crisis.

ASBYU President Dave Lister said the committee can practice conservation in their apartment. "Building a conscientious awareness is part of the solution," he said.

He said many students don't think about wasting electricity because their utilities are included in their rent. "We can do a lot more in shutting off lights and stores when no one is using them, as well as planning out errands. We need to make it so we don't make wasteful trips," he added.

Stuart said being energy conscious now will be helpful to students in the future because most students will have to pay their own utility bills upon leaving school.

The Energy Conservation Committee, made up of BYU students, is currently in the process of organizing some energy saving programs.

Committee Chairman Ray Stuart said the committee is presently working with Provo planners to improve bike routes to BYU and change bus routes to the student population.

Stuart said the committee is also organizing car pools for students and faculty which will be implemented on a trial basis in November and will be expanded to a larger scale depending on demand during the winter semester.

"Energy conservation is needed," Stuart said. "And we're working on it."

Anyone interested in energy conservation and BYU's Energy Week in October can contact the ASBYU office, extension 3001.

400 students to dazzle, dance, and sing

commented Gene Schmidt of Public Communications: "I think that strongly indicates the professional quality of the performance."

Well-known radio and television broadcaster Skipper Knud will introduce a variety of songs, dances, comedy and instrumental numbers performed by BYU groups which have toured throughout the world this summer.

The Ballroom Dance Company which received plaudits last spring at the world championship dance competition in England, will perform "Elegance."

Combined Young Ambassadors groups will present "Friendship and Understanding" especially for kids, complete with animal costumes. A first-year Young Ambassador tour from mainland China this summer performed at the Peking Theater, according to Schmidt.

Young Ambassadors groups also toured in Poland, Switzerland, Germany and Austria this spring, as well as in the U.S. and Canada.

The crowd-winning A Cappella Choir, led by Dr. Ralph Wadsworth, will sing a traditional Negro

Representing Indian, Polynesian and Latin American cultures, the Lamanite Generation will present traditional songs and dances at "Spectacular '79."

Spiritual and composition by Jane Putt, a BYU music composition graduate, titled "Glory to God."

The Philharmonic Orchestra will play "Capriccio Espagnol" and accompany a creative ballet performed by Deryll Yeager and Connie Fries.

Representing the Indian, Polynesian and Latin American cultures will be the Lamanite Generation, directed by Jane Thompson, performing traditional Indian songs and dances and an original composition by student Rick Lane.

Fresh from a six-country tour of Eastern Europe, the International Folk Dancers will add a touch of Israeli and European cultures with "The Joy of Youth" and "Hopak."

Specialty numbers feature Linda Tang performing the Chinese colonial dance, Alberto Roy and Maria Ponce with a fast-stepping Mexican dance, and country-western singers, the Tingey Sisters. BYU's Synthesis will be the backup band for the student show.

Tickets are now on sale at the Marriott Center ticket office for $3 and $4.

'Heaven Knows Why'

Humorous Mormon novel reissued

By JEAN N. PAULSON
Universe Guest Book Reviewer
When Samuel W. Taylor published his first novel, Heaven Knows Why in 1948, it blazed new trails as far as Mormon literature is concerned. First, it was not about pioneer life, but about contemporary Latter-day Saint culture; second, it was funny.

Until that time, practically everything written about the Saints was somber in tone, and for the most part, either pro or con, favorable or unfavorable, in any case, it was deadly serious.

Taylor's book, then, was shocking to some people. He didn't poke a little fun at the fables and events of his own people. He was traveling a different path in this particular genre, but writers of other religious faiths had done much the same thing about their own people.

Some examples are: Gang My Way, about Catholic priests; The House of Mirth, about a girl who left a convent because of love; Piddler on the Roof, concerning cultural problems of Jews in Russia; and Friendly Persuasion, which gently ribbed the Quakers.

Taylor, a native of Provo who began to show his considerable writing talents as a columnist on the BYU predecessor of The Daily Universe, will be at Sam Wells' Zone Bookstore in Salt Lake City on Oct. 6, from 12 noon until 2 p.m. to autograph copies of a paperback release of Heaven Knows Why, as well as his new book, Ricky Mountain Empire, which contains chapters about famous BYU professors and administrators. It will be interesting to see if some LDS people still resent the way Taylor handled (hilariously) some of the more colorful aspects of Mormon culture.

One BYU professor, who is a specialist in writing and literature, told Taylor recently that after 30 years his novel stands alone. "It was unique. There simply wasn't another humorous Mormon novel."

Dr. Kenneth Hunsaker of Utah State University, in a survey of Mormon literature, called it "the best Mormon novel."

Taylor said that "While I was, of course, pleased by this recognition, I was fully aware of the lack of competition."

The original edition was chosen as an alternate selection of the Library Guild, which described it as "in the best tradition of leisurely American humor," and "a funny book that is really funny."

Heaven Knows Why first appeared as a six-part serial in the late 1940s, weekly, Colliers, in which it bore Taylor's original title, "The Mysterious Way." There it generated numerous favorable letters.

The new edition of the book, a paperback, is being published by Millennium Productions, Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Those who are acquainted with other fictional work by Taylor are aware that he enjoys writing, fantasizing. As he wrote in this is the Absent Minded Professor who invented "Bubble" and was glorified in Walt Disney films.

Hansen opens with an anecdote about Momi Skinner, "who worked in Heaven, of course, was a very busy place because every act and thought of everybody on earth had to put on the books and cross-indexed, and even the fall of a sparrow had to be noted, for some reason Momi couldn't understand."

The plot of the novel mainly concerns the efforts of Jackson Skinner, Mormon, to marry the belle of the Valley, Katie Jensen, daughter of the bishop.

Among the complications are Katie's prior engagement to Henry Brown, and the fact that young Jackson is "tall and lanky," Mormon's efforts to bring him out of his trashiness and to affect the marriage result in a series of funny situations which become further as they expand.

The BYU professor who wrote a paper on Samuel W. Taylor, Heaven Knows Why suggested that in the intervening (three) decades since the novel was published in 1948, "the Mormons have matured to the point where they can now chuckle rather than blush at some of the fables and concepts of their culture."

In fact, Taylor said, "If I'm wrong, heaven help me."

Play 'Adam and Eve' to appear in art gallery

Moses may not have approved of Mark Twain's version of the Adam and Eve story, but then Moses wrote scripture. Twain wrote for fun. The BYU Department of Theater and Cinematic Arts will present "Adam and Eve," satiric humor from Mark Twain, Sept. 28 in the ELWC Art Gallery.

Directed by Professor Preston Gledhill, the play will be presented twice, at 8:45 and 7:15 p.m., and will feature Cindy Chapman as Eve and Matthew Hicks as Adam.

"The whole thing is short, about 20 to 25 minutes long," Gledhill said, "so people can go to dinner, watch the show, and then go to the 'Spectacular' or a dance."

The play is the Department of Theater and Cinematic Arts' contribution to the BYU Founder's Day activities. The Art Department will sponsor an art display and lecture Sept. 25, also in the ELWC Art Gallery. The exhibit, entitled "Early Utah Artists," will be on display through Sept. 29. The lecture, which will discuss the artists, will be given at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. Sept. 25, said Martin Roub, Founder's Day Committee chairman for the College of Fine Arts and Communications. Both the play and the lecture are free.

A good defense can decide the outcome of a football game.

Whittingham's football experience and his knowledge of the different phases of the game would be hard to match.

He was an All-State fullback for his high school in Rhode Island. He then came to BYU and played the 1957-58 seasons as a tight end and a defensive end in the days when athletes played both offense and defense.

Transferring to Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo, he played from 1960 to 1961 as an offensive guard, tight end, and defensive end. While at Cal Poly he earned Small College All-America honors, along with his

In 1962, Whittingham signed as a free agent with the Los Angeles Rams and played three years with them as a defensive end and offensive guard. He was traded to the Philadelphia Eagles in 1965 and was picked by the New Orleans Saints in the expansion draft in 1967.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ken Oberkfell singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning, and the St. Louis Cardinals took a 7-2 decision over Philadelphia in a game high-lighted by Pete Rose's record-making 200th hit of the season.

Rose reached the 200-hit circle for the 10th time in his career with a single in the second inning, thus becoming the first major league player to accomplish that feat. The hit, which extended his hitting streak to 22 games, enabled him to break the record he had shared with the legendary Ty Cobb.

Pete Vuckovich, 15-1, was the winner with relief help from Roy Thomas, Randy Lerch, 10-13, took the loss.

Each team scored once in the first inning. St. Louis used a double by Garry Templeton and a single by Ted Simmons, while the Phillies countered with a double by Larry Bowa and a single by Bake McBride.

George Hendrick singled to open the Cards sixth and moved to second when Lerch fumbled. Ken Reitz's grounder for an error. Oberkfell followed with a single to center for the go-ahead run.

It was with the Saints that Whittingham was picked as a member of the All-Eastern Conference Team and the All-NFL second team as a linebacker in 1968. He played for the Dallas Cowboys in 1969, the Boston Patriots in 1970 and finished his 10 year pro career with the Philadelphia Eagles in 1971.

Whittingham then started his coaching career at Alhambra High School in California as head football coach. His team compiled an 8-1 record in 1972. The next season he came to BYU and was put in charge of the linebackers. He has been responsible for the development of such linebacking greats as Rod Wood, Larry Miller, Blake Murdoch, Marc Bernstein and Tom Enlow of recent years, and coming stars such as Gary Kama, Glen Redd and Ed St. Pierre.

Last Spring, Whittingham was made defensive coordinator for the Cougars and helped them to a record of 10-2-1, which helped upset Texas A&M in a rough Weber State.

Playing pro ball has heavily influenced Whittingham's defensive thinking, and along with coaches Dick Felt and Tom Ramage, BYU's 4-3 defensive alignment has been most successful.

"When you're successful, you don't change your basic philosophy, you just work to improve the fine points," said Whittingham. This philosophy explains why the Cougars' defense remains basically the same from week to week and doesn't adjust radically for each new opponent. During the games, Whittingham calls the defensive strategies from the sidelines and signals them to the middle linebacker.

Fred Whittingham is one of the most respected and well-liked men on the Cougar coaching staff because of his knowledge of the game and the excellent physical condition that he keeps himself in. Players have said that he looks like he should be suiting up for the games, and that it inspires them to train harder because of his example.

Linebacker leads defense in WAC wars

By TED A. IZATT
Universe Sports Writer

Texas A&M took the field against BYU early, and sports people across the nation said that the running attacks of freshman candidate Curtis Dickey and his teammate Woodard would demolish the Cougar defense. It was not to be, as BYU's middle line, led by the 225-pound, 6-foot-4-inch constantly stopped the Aggies' run.

It's afraid of Dickey or Woodard," said wanted the chance to tackle two of the best backs in the nation."

assists, turning honors as the Western Conference defensive player of the week as Associated Press national linemen of the the first time a BYU defensive player has an award. "I was home watching television and heard about the AP award. It really surprised me," said Kama.

He said he wasn't as concerned about the fact that Dickey and Woodard are two of the best runners in the country as he was about stopping the run up the middle and force them to pass. I felt it was about that."

He spent his first three years with the Cougars behind Rod Wood. He redshirted last year because he felt it would do better if I waited until graduated. We alternated a lot but I'm now the starting position this year."

At Louis High School in Honolulu, Kama was a 3.4 GPA, played in the state high school game and earned four letters. "The major college teams that recruited me were BYU, I chose BYU because I wanted to maintain the same factor in my decision-making factors at the Y."

He said his personal goals this season are to play as he can have a successful season and a 11.0 record. "Of course," Kama said, "the team is shooting for the WAC championship and the Bowl berth."

Hopes to play in CFL community recreation major hopes to play and football next year, but not with the Football League. "Because of my age I could compete better in the Canadian Football League. I don't make it in the pros I'd like to go Hawaii and work as a community recreation or coach," he said.

He said his team is the best he's ever played on.
"The biggest advantage we have is unity-we're not inactive feelings between the players.
Everyone has a good attitude about the game and we realize that the conference is up for us. Every team has a chance for it. I think our competition will be New Mexico and but any team could win on any day."

He said Kama didn't play in the game against Utah because he felt that one reason BYU was not as good as they were is because that one reason defeated was that many BYU players weren't up for the game. "Many of the players thought that because Utah hadn't been playing very well they'd be easy.

Well, this year we're going to be prepared, not overconfident."

To be an effective middle linebacker, "You've got to be a crazy guy because there are huge guys trying to knock your head off," Kama said.

Defensive captain
"As a middle linebacker I am the defensive captain on the field and get the plays from Coach (Fred) Whittingham. I have to be constantly aware of all the options the other team has. A linebacker has to constantly concentrate on what the other team is doing.
Learning to do that takes a lot of instinct, concentration and repetition. It takes mental toughness to do all these things at once and still be prepared to have the big guys over you."

"Once the ball is snapped I think 'tackle, tackle.'" Kama avoids thinking about the possibility of getting injured while he's playing. "No, I never think about getting injured. That's the worst thing to do and you lose your concentration. When playing, you can't lose your concentration."

My wife worries about it a lot. I worry about it in the sense that I want to stay healthy but during a game it does no good to worry."

"Danny Frasier's injury was a big loss to the team.
Ed St. Pierre has come on up to a great job for the team but I really think Frasier had a good shot at the pro."

Kama said that the Texas A&M game was probably the biggest game in BYU's history. "In high school I saw them on television and dreamed that I could play against a team like that someday. Their fans were incredible. They stood and cheered and cheered and were well-mannered. I've never seen fans like that before. I like playing away games because hearing the fans cheer for the other team helps me get psyched up to go out and beat them."

He said Kama didn't play in the game against Utah because he felt that one reason BYU was not as good as they were is because that one reason

Y linebacker ready to play for Cougars

Linebacker Glenn
Redd is expected to play in this Saturday's homecoming game against the University of Texas-El Paso.

Redd missed the Weber State game
because of a slight concussion he suffered in practice earlier in the week.

The 6-2, 227-pound junior is expected to be one of the best linebackers in the Western Athletic Conference this year.

In 1978 he led the Cougars in defensive points against Arizona

Oregon State when he filled in for injured All-
WAC linebacker Rod
Wood.

Understanding and improving your memory

This exciting credit course is designed to help you develop the great potential of your mind.
The course is devoted to gaining an understanding of what memory is, how it works and ways for improving learning and memory abilities. General principles of learning and effective strategies for studying will be discussed as well as specific memory techniques and systems. The principles, strategies, and techniques will be applied to such examples as memory skills at schoolwork, life, naming, and many other numbers, dates, talks, and statistics.

Cougar kickers downed thrice

in three tough road games in less than 24 hours. BYU Soccer team found victories hard to come by in weekend action in Colorado.

The team followed a 4-0 defeat to Colorado College on Friday, followed by a tough loss to a physical team, JMU, on Saturday morning. That evening the team traveled to Denver where they were defeated by the Broncos.

The team's record is now 1-2-1. The team they were upended by Metcalf State, 3-2.

Darius commented that the team is getting better and better. "We have a young squad that is really trying. They never give up and are always putting the pressure on. The inexperience of the players shows, but they are gaining with the game experience. They were especially pleased with the performance of sophomore David Rasmussen. He played well in his first game."

We need to concentrate more on our shooting power, taking more shots that are on target. We'll just have to practice harder in these areas and pull things together for our next games."

Despite the losing weekend, the Soccerists are showing good spirit and are determined to break their losing streak this weekend. The Cougars were minus their best two midfielders on the road trip, along with several other key players who should be returning to action.

Suit halts refunds

By JERRY PAINTER

Universe Staff Writer
The Utah State Tax Commission office expects to refund some $18 million in money refunds to Utah residents, but a lawsuit temporarily halting the money flow could limit the refund to constitutional.

Some BYU students have the possibility of receiving $100. The processing of forms is continuing, but the Utah State Tax Commission has ceased to issue checks. Residents, who will have lived in the state during the 1979 year qualify for a refund, a commission spokesman said, but a law suit filed by treasurer Lynn C. Baker prompted the District Judge G. Hal Taylor to temporarily restrain any further disbursement until a hearing slated on Oct. 1 determines the refund's constitutionality. Residents should fill out the forms and send them in. State Tax commission chairman David Duncan said.

Some 17,000 BYU students pay rent for off campus housing, with about 6,000 living on campus. Students living on campus do not qualify for the refunders refund because of the tax free status of the university, a spokesman at the BYU Housing office said.

The minimum a renter can receive is $100, but it is possible to receive up to around $400 in certain cases, the spokesman said.

Refunds are given to each rental unit. Claims are based upon the total rent paid for each unit and not upon the number of residents in these units. Cases where several people live in one unit requires one person to apply for the refund on behalf of all.

In those cases, the claim for a refund would be filed in the name of one of the people living in the unit, then divided among the others living there," said a state tax spokesman.

"The one who makes the claim must be a 1979 resident," the spokesman said. "About five percent of those that apply will get their claim," the spokesman said. "Some people just fail to see if they can get the money even though they don't qualify."

The Utah legislature decided to distribute the excess funds left over from the general fund to Utah residents. The $18 million refund to renters and another $48 million to home owners created some controversy when it was discovered the state budget would be left about $4 million short, the tax spokesman said.

Forms for the renters refund, and other real estate tax refunds can be picked up at the Utah County Tax Assessors Office in the County Building, at the corner of University and Center Street. Deadline for filing refund forms is December 31 of this year. For more information call 1-800-962-4335.

Gardening profitable for married students

Garden plots the size of an average bedroom are producing heavy yields of fruit and vegetables for married BYU students.

Nearly 200 garden plots across the street from Wyomont Terrace (married housing) are producing everything from tomatoes to squash for the young families.

The previously unused 1.5 acre of land at the intersection of the BYU Sixth Street was developed into garden plots by LDS Bishop Dan Bates, state garden chairman, coordinated the division of the property into plots about 14 feet square.

Last spring the property was plowed and families signed up to do the planting, fertilizing, weeding, and harvesting. Each family paid $2 for water, which covered most of the cost for the gardening season. "The garden has not been an expense for the school," said Bates. "We buy our own replacement hoses and pipes. The families have paid their own way."

The entire area is serviced by a water sprinkling system installed in one corner of the land by the BYU Grounds Department. Students move the system around the land to assure all the gardeners of water. The system is automatic, usually watering two to three times a week.

After being plowed, the area was divided through the center, corners of the stake. Students and their families removed rocks and planted what they wanted, within the established rule. Bates said they had some problems with "spenders" such as pumpkins that spread from the original plot others.

Cheryl Budge, a Wyomont Terrace resident, said this was her first year's experience. "It's great to walk to the garden and pick the fresh produce of seeing it develop," she said.

The gardens have also helped families' food budgets. Jon and Jani Ribey, Provo, Calif., said the gardens has reduced their monthly food bill considerably.

Although a few plots have been neglected because the original planter moved during the summer, most are producing lots of tomatoes, squash, cucumbers, broccoli, carrots, beets and other vegetables. Kerry and Karla Gole said they bottled up carrots to last them for the winter for just one year.

"A few students tried watermelons but weren't too successful," Bates said. "The largest ones are about the size of a soccer ball and may not mature before the first frost blows in."

Most of the gardens are managed by experienced student gardeners, but some are new. Bates said he served that many experienced gardeners were sharing their knowledge with those who were beginners. "The gardens have been a good learning experience," he said.

One phone call can bring to a ward or campus-affiliated organization anything from a life planning workshop to a crisis counseling lecture in BYU's Outreach program.

Outreach, sponsored by the College of Student Life, is an effort to bring University services directly to the students, said Dr. Norman Robble, University chairperson of interpersonal relations who pioneered the program.

"We've always been willing to take programs out to students," said Dr. Robble. "But we've never really coordinated to do it until now."

The program was piloted during summer term in Tingley Hall's Hall. One lecture concerned physical fitness, and at the end of the presentation, all participants were challenged to jog right then, up to and around the Promis Temple.

"The response was good," said Alice Dunn, Heritage Hall manager. "A lot of the girls just got up and ran around the temple. They never would have done it if they hadn't needed the lecture."

The feedback was positive even in Tingley Hall that the program is being conducted this semester in every hall of the Heritage Hall complex.

Representatives from Outreach meet with the head resident of the halls and the hall residents. Riders upon residents are also encouraged to come and get their work involved.

The representatives all down together and decide what it is the people involved could benefit from. Dr. Robble then handles all scheduling. "We're beginning with Heritage Hall. They are the only place or organization that we formally meet with to get the program going. But any other organization can have us bring the program to them.

Some of the lectures offered by Outreach are relaxation and stress control, depression, obesity, cultural awareness, roommate and dates, how to use your roommate and get away with it, leadership training and many others. "If a group comes to us with special needs," we can develop one for them," said Shanna Damitz, a graduate assistant for the program. "It doesn't necessarily have to be one that we've already got on our list."

The lectures described on the list are already completely structured, and several lectures are always prepared to deliver an address on the subject. "If groups will come through us, I can do the scheduling right away. I will completely take care of that," said Dr. Robble. "All they need to do is provide a place and time to have it."

"The Outreach lectures are free of charge due to joint sponsorship by the College of Student Life and the ASBYU Vice President's Office."

Student awareness of the program is not widespread. "In four years of going to school at BYU, I never knew any of the things offered by the school existed," said Shanna Starr, now a head resident in Heritage Hall. "The Outreach program is very beneficial to the students, and is brought directly to them. I've been very pleased with the results that we've had."

"People just don't realize what we have here," said Ms. Damitz. "We're free people can be off the hook if they just give us one phone call," she said.

Interested organizations can contact Dr. Robble's office by calling 317-EXT. 2911.

Pope injured in '70 attack

MILAN, Italy AP — The private secretary to the late Pope Paul VI revealed that the pontiff actually was wounded by a knife-wielding man who attacked him at an airport in the Philippines in 1970, but the Pope, Francis Macchi, said the Pope forbade any report of his injury.

Reports at the time of the incident said the pontiff had not been touched by his attacker. But in a speech Sunday at Milan's cathedral, Macchi said the "assassin wounded the pontiff in the chest. He did not say how seriously the pope was hurt."

Benjamin Mendosa, the pontiff's attacker, struck at the pope stepped off a plane at Manila airport in November, 1970. Mendosa served 30-months in a four-year sentence before he was deported to his homeland in 1974.
